1130 – 1230 hrs Panel discussion on “Taking Charge – India Inc’s leading the way”

It has been 20 years since the liberalization of Indian economy was initiated. We have come a long way since then. The country has since then seen growth in leaps and bounds and often times the private sector is credited with a significant share of this growth story. The telecom revolution has been a success story of social revolution that few would have anticipated. However, there is also criticism that India Inc has not been a game changer in ways that it could have been. In a country where the debate is often centered around whether we are in Bharat or India and whether we are shining or not, India Inc has been steadily leading the way. Job creation, wealth creation and value addition – these seem to be the fundamental principles that are guiding them in the process.

1400 – 1430 hrs In Conversation: “Governance and the Role of Young Indians”

64 years hence independence and 61 years after the establishment of the republic, there is a widely shared desire in the country to evaluate the gains made as also to assess the future. Undoubtedly, the people of the country and the managers of society can be congratulated on many counts for India’s achievements since independence which include self sufficiency in many areas, a strong industrial base, a rising expectancy of life, a higher percentage of literacy, a united and better integrated India and a growing recognition by the world of our capabilities and potential. On the negative side, one could highlight the nagging problem of unemployment, poverty, illiteracy accentuated by an ever increasing population and a low per capita income. All these factors impact governance and it is time that we have a reality check and understand how we, as citizens can contribute to the efficiency of the system.

Young Indians as an integral part of CII was launched in 2002 to involve young Indians in nation building activities by being the Voice of Young Indians – starting with 2 chapters, Yi has today upwards of 1000 members from 24 chapters in 20 states with a common commitment and passion towards contributing to a better India. Apart from Learning which is a major activity area with Yi, the focus areas environment, education, healthcare, arts, sports and culture. More recently, Yi has been focusing on Innovation and Next Practices, in line with the vision of Professor CK Prahalad and his vision for India @ 75, a cause that has bonded this organisation even more stronger than before. The membership of Yi is very inclusive in nature – apart from young CEOs, entrepreneurs, working professionals it has dedicated Farmers Net and Students Net to engage with these important stakeholder community. Yi is one of the founder members of the Young Entrepreneurs’ Alliance and represents the country at the G20 Young Entrepreneur Summit, apart from at the Commonwealth Business Forum and Boao Youth Summit. The future for the organisation looks exciting and promising, more than ever. It is time to discuss with the national leadership from the early days and discuss, introspect and plan for the days ahead.
